

Civil Society Representative from one of the worst affected communities in Eucerus

Last year, your brother's youngest son drowned in flood water before the evacuation process started. Your family barely could cover the expenses for the burial. Other people in the area where you live also lost loved ones or at least suffered important losses.

You know of at least ten teenager boys who joined the EFF after the last flood season in order to lighten the load on the family and make some money. Your oldest son has made comments he might want to join too, but so far you have been able to talk him out of it.

It has been over a year since the last big clash took place near your community, but the unexploded grenades are still there in your fields, only now the mud has covered them up and you are no longer sure exactly where they are. Your community has been repeatedly displaced because of the conflict and each time new unexploded "bombs" are found afterwards in your fields.

In 2012 the winter storm also flooded the area. People have difficulties accessing services because they lost their personal ID documents in previous floods. You want financial support and commitments to your community, but aid doesn't reach here. You are also not sure if the EFF will allow your community to keep any aid you might receive, or if they will take part of it. But you also don't want the TAF there, because people may be accused of being informants for the government.

You are here because you want to make sure that there are provisions in the early action planning to reach and support the most vulnerable. You want people to understand how dangerous it is to live in rural areas.
