

Civil Military Coordinator (from TAF)

You are here to see how you can support the government service providers and, when possible, NGOs in their work. However, with stretched resources, the TAF can't dedicate too much to humanitarian efforts (but is willing to do its best).

Your commander tasked you to engage primarily with requests which would allow the TAF to gain "hearts and minds" of the population in the conflict area.

You are willing to receive the aid that needs to reach hotspots and distribute it accordingly. Alternatively, the TAF could accompany civilians with the aim of aid distribution, but this requires more resources and logistics from the TAF and is not preferred (in addition, while the TAF provides security protection they can't ensure safety of civilians during these operations). Convoy security can be arranged if really necessary but needs to be done with a week's notice as this means shifting some of the fighting forces around to secure the roads.

In the past, the TAF has provided permanent security in displacement camps, but these operations only last a couple of weeks, during the height of the emergencies.

You understand that the Red Cross works independently and you respect that, however all other civilians would need to travel with you in military vehicles, just to be safe.
