

Officer of the Peace Building Committee (PBC)

The PBC intends to tackle inter-connecting conflict drivers and strengthens community-level, national, and cross-border peacebuilding. Members of the PBC, including women, youth, elders and religious leaders, are receiving training to increase their capacity to undertake peacebuilding initiatives that effectively manage existing and new conflicts.

In your view, marginalization of Eucerians represent a persistent cause of conflict in Tumerington. You would like to see emergency aid delivered in a manner, so it also promotes development, peace, security, and human rights. In addition, the PBC recently concluded that building on factors that strengthen social cohesion in a conflict and displacement context can contribute to peacebuilding. You understand that social cohesion is about a sense of belonging, trust in persons and institutions, and mutual respect.

You want to ensure all actors act in a manner that is sensitive to the tensions between various groups, including aspects which divide and those that connect parties. Furthermore, you want to raise awareness on unintended tensions which might result from services provided by members of this meeting. However, your ability to monitor this due to your organisation's movement restrictions in Eucerus is limited to the surrounding areas of Momoal, including the IDP camps around the regional capital.
